Penicillin Allergy Review
Outcome: NOT ALLERGIC

Three horizontal, wavy bands of blue color at the bottom of the page, with the top band being a lighter shade of blue and the bottom band being a darker shade.

You agreed to have a review of your penicillin allergy status. We are pleased to advise that the symptoms described during questioning suggest that you DO NOT have a penicillin allergy.

The symptoms you have experienced in the past are likely a non-allergic side-effect of antibiotics, which are common. It is not certain that this will occur again so it should not prevent you taking penicillins in the future if you require them.

What does this mean for me?

You no longer need to tell medical teams looking after you that you are allergic to penicillin e.g. when you are taken into hospital. This means if you ever need treatment for an infection in future you will now be able to receive antibiotics which contain penicillin. If you had side effects, such as nausea, when you took penicillin in the past, you may still want to tell your doctor as they may give you medication to reduce these to take along with the antibiotics.

What happens now?

A letter will be sent to your GP to let them know this and to ask them to remove 'penicillin allergy' from your medical record. We will also remove it from your hospital record.

Please let any other healthcare staff who may prescribe or give you medicines know that your allergy record has been updated. If you have any questions about the penicillin allergy review, please speak to a member of the medical team looking after you.
